1 You don't feel comfortable putting together a plan.

You may not have the time, interest or knowledge to create a financial plan. For example, you may not know how to best plan for your retirement or how to improve your tax situation. Financial advisors can help you look at the big picture and put your finances in order.

2 You need help understanding and choosing investments.

How do you choose investments that will help you reach your financial goals? A financial advisor can help you develop an investment strategy to fit your goals and your comfort level with risk.

3 You need help to ensure you and your family are adequately protected in the event of your death or disability.

Life insurance, disability insurance, critical illness insurance, mortgage insurance, long term care insurance...a financial advisor can help you understand what is available and help you set in place the protection you need.

4 Your life has changed and you don't know how to change your plan.

Consider how a life change affects your plan. You might get a pay raise and need to update your plan to decide what to do with the extra money. Will you save it, spend it or pay down debt? How will your financial goals change if you get married, start a family, get divorced or approach retirement?

A financial advisor will help you adjust your plan as your life changes and will also help you set priorities from among your various life goals.
